What is a solar panel?

A Solar panels (also known as " PV panels") is a device that converts light from the sun, which is composed of particles of energy called "photons", into electricity that can be used to power electrical loads.

Why are solar panels important?

Solar panels are the most important part of a solar power system since they produce the electricity that eventually finds it's way to your laptop, lights and television. In this basic introduction, we look at how this happens. How do solar panels work?

Solar panels convert sunlight into electricity through a process called the photovoltaic effect.

What is the difference between photovoltaic and solar panels?

Photovoltaic panels, on the other hand, are those that generate electricity using photovoltaic solar energy. How do solar panels work?

The photovoltaic cells in solar panels are those that have the capacity to generate electricity from the impact of solar radiation.

How do solar panels work?

Solar panels work by converting sunlight into electricity through a process called the photovoltaic effect. This process produces direct current (DC) electricity, which then needs to be converted to alternating current (AC) electricity for your home to use.
