Do rooftop solar panels have a soundproofing effect

Overview

Should solar panels be used with green roofs?

Solar panels should be used in tandem with green roofs. Besides increased biodiversity on the roof and higher solar energy harvesting efficiency during hot periods, such panels are also predicted to increase noise shielding.

Do solar panels increase noise shielding?

Besides increased biodiversity on the roof and higher solar energy harvesting efficiency during hot periods, such panels are also predicted to increase noise shielding. With increasing inclination angle and especially when there are no gaps between the bottom of the panels and the green roof, positive effects become more pronounced.

Do solar panels reduce sound pressure?

Solar panels on green roofs were found to significantly decrease sound pressure levels at the shielded building facade, up to 5 dBA on top of the insertion loss of granular substrates. Polyurethane foam slabs as green roof substrates provide relevant shielding when placed on a series of hollow trapezium-like cores of sufficient height.

Are green roofs sound absorbing?

Specific plant species are able to colonize shaded zones on roofs.³⁷ Green roofs have interesting sound absorbing properties as discussed before. Solar panels, in contrast, are acoustically fully rigid.
