Building a DIY generator enclosure is not difficult once you have all the necessary tools and materials. Before we move onto the steps for building a generator noise reduction box, let us have a look.

What is a generator silencer?

These silencers are often used in places like hospitals, airports, and data centers. They help manage both low and high-frequency noise. Their flexible performance makes them suitable for meeting critical grade and hospital grade sound rating requirements. Generator silencers come in cylindrical or low-profile designs.

How to silence a portable generator?

For this reason, it is important to know how to silence the portable generator. A generator silencer – whether it's a box, muffler, or a damping mat – will help you reduce 10 to 15dB out of the noise output. Required fields are marked *.

Do you need a generator silencer?

But if you already have a generator that works like a lawnmower, this is where you need a generator silencer. Conventional generator silencers are tubes that are plugged into the generator's exhaust to help eliminate the noise it emits. Another option is to make a soundproof generator box to isolate the noise.
